
Pic. 8 (upper left)—The enclosure, or primary enclosure, of a fishweir, encircled with rope and baked down to prevent large fish from breaking out.

Pic. 9 (upper right)—Working around the edges of the [illegible]ure with a fine-mesh hand net. Note the long burlap shirt, frequently worn by fishermen in colder weather.

Pic. 10 (lower left)—Transferring the fish from the hand net [illegible] a palm-leaf basket. Note the narrower entrance into the primary enclosure formed by the wings of the secondary enclosure; this entrance becomes narrower toward the bottom.

Pic. 11 (lower right)—Carrying the basket of fish ashore, slung from an oar. Fishweirs in the background.
